Curfew now dead issue

by Pam Heinzen

Students who like to stay out late at night need no longer be concerned about obeying a curfew unless one is set by parents.

The Public Property and Safety Committee (PPSC), was to discuss the validity of a curfew with the Crime Prevention Committee (CPC) and present the proposal to the Manitowoc Common Council. But the CPC voted 7-3 against the curfew. Their findings showed that a curfew would not be satisfactory in curbing vandalism.

According to Sheriff Thomas Kocourek, chairman of the CPC, ten cities similar in size to Manitowoc were picked to fill out a questionnaire. Out of the nine cities who responded, one city spoke favorably for a curfew while another said a curfew had little effect if any on curbing vandalism, which occurred before 11 p.m.

Alderman Daniel Schuster, chairman of the PPSC, said it would be difficult to set specific time slots and ages for a curfew, adding, "I am not in favor of something that's not enforceable." Kocourek said that it would be unfair to punish the 90 percent of the student population that causes no problems.

According to Schuster, on a scale from one to ten, students rated a six in having something to do with the dropping of the curfew issue. Student senate's curfew committee voiced its opposition earlier in the year at a public hearing where the curfew issue was being discussed. The committee also sent letters of opposition to the aldermen, mayor, and chief of police, and others involved in the curfew issue.

Drug-alcohol survey okayed by board; Students given survey in homerooms

Last Monday 175 LHS students took the guidance department drug and alcohol survey. The survey was also given to junior high students to see if the trend is changing between the seventh and twelfth grades.

The guidance department put many hours into writing the survey. They viewed eight other surveys to get ideas and then added their own. They also asked teachers for their ideas on what should be on the survey. Finally, they had several students read it to get their opinions of it.

The survey was then reviewed by the school board and they approved it.

The survey differs greatly from the League of Women Voter's survey offered earlier in the year. According to Guidance Department Head, Mrs. Cheryl Matthias, the League's survey dealt with frequency and usage while the guidance department survey deals with school experiences, parental influences, and how the department can help.

Some effects from the survey should be seen next year. Others, such as curriculum changes, might not take effect for a while. Math Department Head, Courtney Leonard wrote a computer program to tabulate all the answers.

The guidance department refused to let Flashes see the survey, but one student was willing to talk about it. The student said, "I thought the survey was stupid. They give you choices that really aren't your reasons."

Constitution 'hard-to-get'

Student senator Al Patek felt that the Constitution of the LHS Senate needed revising, so he revised it. The he ordered 35 copies made at the McKinley duplicating center and he ran into some problems.

According to Senate Advisor Lowell LaLeike, Patek had no authorization to order those copies and no authoritative groups ever indicated any interest in it.

LaLeike says that a constitutional revision must come from the constitution committee and that the copies would have been a senate expense only if the revision had come from that committee.

Senate Vice President and Constitution Committee Chairperson, Kim Meidl stated at the constitution committee meeting that no action could be taken until each senate member had a copy of the revision and had time to look it over before the next senate meeting.

A motion was passed 9-2, with two abstentions, at the April 8 senate meeting to have the 35 copies of the revision made.

Patek told a Flashes reporter that he had offered to pay for the copies if he received them, but that LaLeike refused. LaLeike says that Patek never made such an offer.

So now LaLeike has the 35 copies of the revision in his possession and a printing bill of $12.

Schedule changes difficult

by Naomi Wiesner

"I don't really want this class next year. I wonder if I can still change my schedule." Chances are slim for any more schedule changes. Most of the first semester classes are already set with very few, if any, changes being made after the registration date.

When the guidance department checks over the computerized schedules this summer, some conflicts between classes may show up. If this is the case, the student will be called to come to school. Then the guidance counselor and the student can work out the schedule conflict. The only other changes allowed this summer are changes in career plans. If this should occur, the student, his parents, and the counselor will discuss the changes.

Second semester classes might be changed before second semester begins if the changes requested meets the guidelines listed in the course of study bulletin.

Next year's lunch hours will be changed. There will be three half-hour lunch periods during the fifth hour, this being the only time that students can eat lunch.

Many of the students have been using their lunch period to leave school. "There are too many people that have been taking a lunch hour as time to go any place. Hopefully, the new lunch periods will prevent this," says Principal William Malinsky.

Grants, loans available

Seniors who were confused with the financial aid programs for college can relax a little. A delay in processing financial aid proposals, due to the uncertainty of the types of cuts or changes the Reagan administration might make, has just about ended. Now it's the students who must work fast.

Some institutions may not be able to produce award letters for freshman until June. When students receive their financial aid proposal, it's recommended that they respond immediately.

When students receive the Student Elegibility Report, which comes from the Basic Grant Program, they should send it to the financial aid office at the college or technical school they plan to attend as soon as possible.

The Guaranteed Student Loan is available through banks, credit unions, and loan associations. Students may pick up applications at the above locations, and should apply for them by June 15. The reason for the early date is that the Guaranteed Student Loan Program may change in the future, but it isn't known when or how the changes will take place.

News In Brief

Sophomores and juniors who have classes scheduled on Wednesday will be penalized one hour for each hour cut. The time must be made up before a final grade will be given out.

Student senate adviser creates vacuum

Student Senate is still having problems? That's right.

A few senate members decided to have a meeting last Wednesday without their advisor, since he both failed to show up and failed to find a replacement quite a few times now. At their meeting, they terminated this year's senate, so that next year's officers could begin their term.

But their advisor is now saying they did not hold a legal meeting. Therefore, this year's senate is not yet terminated, and next year's senate can not begin yet.

If all of this seems ridiculous to you, you're not alone. It would not take much for senate and their advisor to resolve their differences. First, senate should call a meeting. Mr. LaLieke should be sure to make it to this one, as should all senate members. Once this legal meeting begins, senate can finish up their year. Next year's senate can then begin without any of the present senate's problems hanging over their heads.

Since this year's advisor was unable to show up for so many meetings, next year's senate should demand a new advisor who can. The senate cannot be the student government if they don't meet. A lot of this is up to senate members. It's time for them to stop letting the administration manipulate their every move. Student senate is supposed to be the government run by the students, not the administration.

Learning doesn't end with school year

Could it really be true that as we grow older we grow wiser?

Well if life is really just a series of experiences, then it must be. Think of all the things you have learned this year. You may have finished with all A's, with all C's, or you may not have finished at all. Nevertheless, you have learned.

Your teachers have taught you at school, your parents at home, and your friends at parties, school, or wherever you were. In fact, you've probably taught yourself a few things.

The best part about learning is that it doesn't stop. If you have nothing left to look forward to, you always know that tomorrow you'll learn something new.

Next year is another whole year to learn. It may be fun, or boring depending on where you are and who's teaching you. But wherever, whoever; it's your life, so make it good.

Flash-lites

by Pam Heinzen

Before I step down from being the '80-'81 news editor for the Hi-Tower Flashes, I'd like to thank:

Those loyal readers who proceeded to stampede the staff handing out papers, sometimes demanding four to five copies at a time. Who says our audience is disinterested?

Those who were helpful with the stories written, and those who later came to us personally and told us how deeply our words were appreciated.

Those who are masters in the art of destructive criticism...

Those who are illiterate. Being unable to read, they make such creative works of art out of the paper, confetti, hats, airplanes...

"H," for putting up with a short kid with a tall temper.

Suzi, the editor-in-chief, for telling me when my news pages were boring, so at least I'd know what reaction to expect on distribution day.

Jim, for letting me have the most ultimate, grandest, once-in-a-lifetime chance to be news editor.

But to be totally serious (as well as mushy), I'd like to thank Lincoln High School, for supplying me with friends, so I wouldn't have to be alone; for giving me additional knowledge, so I can continue to learn; for organizing extracurricular activities to keep me occupied and involved, thus preventing me from engaging in any self-destructive activities.

Good-bye, LHS. Until we meet again...

Dear Students,

When I started this year out, I have to admit I was a bit afraid of being in charge of the paper. I knew it would be an awful lot of work, but the work didn't bother me. It just seemed strange to be the leader of something in which I was so used to being a follower.

What I'd like to say most is thanks. Thanks to my staff, especially those who stayed to help on those Friday nights when we couldn't wait to get to a party. Thanks to "H", who put up with us (and we gave him enough to put up with). Also thanks to those of you who actually read the paper. It really feels good to see someone want to read what we worked so hard to put out.

See you next year!

Band to play for Packers

by Bill Miller

The LHS Marching Band has been invited to perform at the Green Bay Packer-Seattle Seahawk football game Nov. 1 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay.

Mr. Wilner Burke, director of half-time activities for the Packers, came to LHS to listen to the band in 1979. He later viewed a video tape of their performance at the '79 homecoming game.

Burke was impressed so he came to Manitowoc and watched the band performance at homecoming last fall. In April, he issued the invitation and Music Department Head Dean Torkelson accepted.

"It's an honor to be chosen, one which the whole community is proud of," said Torkelson. "Mr. Greene (concert band director) and I have been working toward this goal for three years," he went on to say.

Torkelson attributed the marching band's success to Instructor John Greene. Greene has had prior experience with marching bands. Before he came to LHS, he arranged music for the Wausau Story Drum and Bugle Corps.

The Marching Band is a combination of the symphonic and concert band. It will feature 150 students with 120 playing wind instruments, 12 on drums, and 18 color guard members.

They will perform a seven-minute pre-game show concluding with the National Anthem and a twelve-minute half-time show.

The music to be played will be chosen by Greene and Torkelson this summer. This is the first Packer game that Lincoln has ever played at.

When the weather was warm enough, many students went outside during the day to soak up some of the sun's rays.

Juniors to attend seminar

by Karen Arndt

Sophomores and juniors from all over the world are uniting at the UW Whitewater Campus for the World Affairs Seminar, June 21-27.

Two juniors from LHS, Tara Brennan and Brenda Burtard, have received full scholarships of $115 from the Manitowoc Rotary Club to attend this seminar.

Approximately three hundred Americans and two hundred foreign exchange students will be attending. There will be debates, guest speakers, discussions, student panels, and other educational visual media. The topic they will discuss, of course, is world affairs.

Brennan and Burtard received these scholarships by writing essays. The Rotary Club announced that anyone who was interested in the seminar should write an essay to explain why. Two Roncalli students were also chosen.

On the campus, students will stay in the dorms and have full use of all recreational facilities.

"It will be a once-in-a-lifetime chance for kids from all over the world to get together and share their ideas," remarked Burtard.

Brennan said, "It will be a good chance for me to broaden my knowledge of world affairs and to share my ideas with kids my own age."

Publication staffs picked

The Hi-Tower Flashes isn't going to be quite so high in the sky next year! In fact, the whole publications staff is moving dowstairs to room 310. The tower will be used for overflow, extra typing, special meetings, and storage.

The Flambeau-Manitou staff for next year is twice as big as this year's. The present Manitou editor, Jill Brefczynski, will be next year's Flambeau-Manitou editor-in-chief.

She will handle a staff of approximately 67 students. Co-editorships and specific jobs have not yet been assigned, though Mary Sauer has indicated an interest in continuing with ads.

Flashes editor-in-chief, Suzi Monka, will return next year. Jim Neuser will return as sports editor and Bill Miller, a reporter this year, will probably be next year's feature editor.

"Flashes is still in need of staff members, specifically artists and typists. People who either have had journalism or are taking it, will have first shot at these positions. Those with junior high school experience will also have priority," said Publications Advisor James Hinstorff.

End of year blues begin

Time sure does fly when you're having fun! It's hard to believe that we are at the end of the school year. Where did all those wonderful months go? Oh, how we all wish it could be the beginning of the year again! There are so many things about school that we will all miss when summer comes, especially those poor unfortunate seniors who won't be coming back next year.

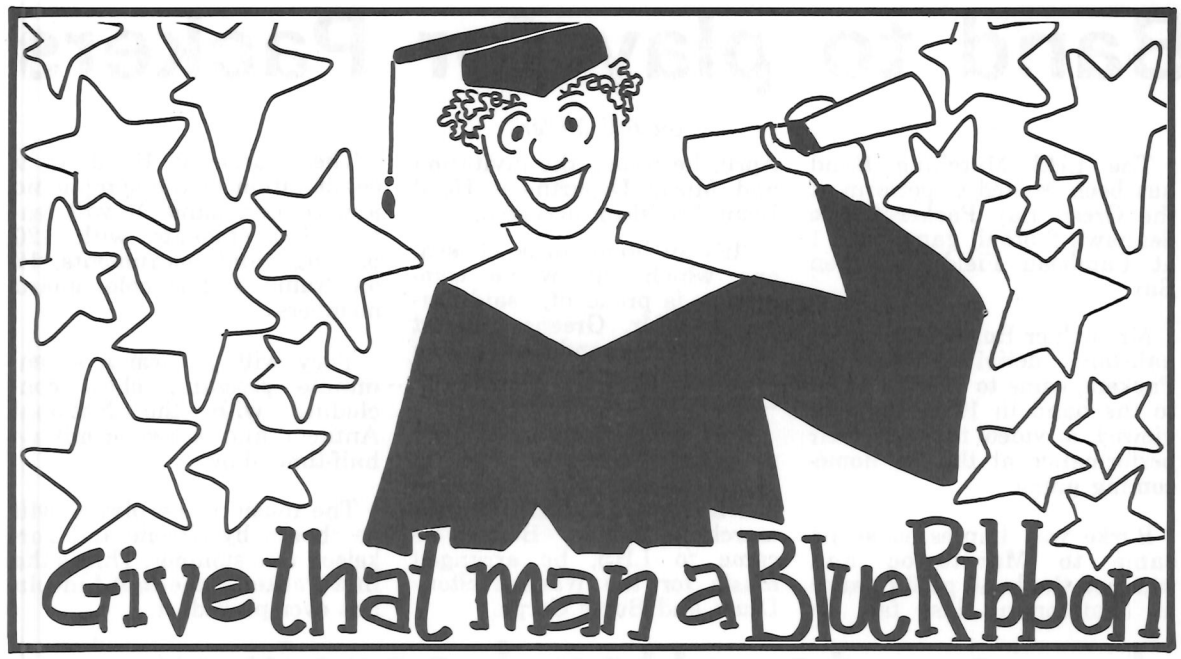
One of the wonderful things students won't get to look forward to during the summer is homework. Remember the hours and hours of homework you would bring home? Remember how your fingers would ache and how your neck would get stiff from leaning over the books? Remember how you had to cancel your plans for going out because you had a really interesting five hundred word report to write? Oh, those were the good old days!

There is another thing that I'm sure all of us will miss and that is tests. You know, those splendid little exams we'd get every week or so. Remember the fear you had, knowing you were going to fail the test because you didn't study. Remember the cheating and crib notes tucked away deep in your pockets. Oh, yes, those were the good old days!

It's sad that now with summer coming we won't be able to do all those things in school that we loved so much. Just think, when summer comes we are going to have all the time in the world. We'll probably be able to do those boring things like swimming, playing baseball, water skiing, and going to parties. We won't be able to do homework or study for tests anymore. It's really sad that we can't relive each moment of our high school days again. At least you lucky sophomores and juniors get to come back next year. Gosh, I envy you!

Upcoming Events

June 5 ..... Science finals will begin.
June 8 ..... Math, Art, Home Ec., part 2 of some science exams will be taken.
June 10 ..... 3:15, Classes end for summer vacation.



Do you have good grammar?

Whether it's the climate in Manitowoc or Lake Michigan's air, there seems to be a disease that has struck a good percentage of people who live here. The disease is not of a viral type but rather verbal. It's a disease of the mouth. The symptoms are improper use of words in terms of their arrangement in phrases and sentences. I call it Grammerosis.

In the English language we have a system of rules for speaking and writing known as the conventional gramical rules. We use these as a guide for the way in which we speak. Poor grammar occurs when a person does not follow these grammatical rules.

Manitowoc is not the only place where Grammerosis is a problem. All over the United States people have grammer problems.

The only way to cure grammerosis is by studying and practicing correct grammar. Don't get into a pattern of poor grammar habits. The sooner you correct it, the easier it will be. If you're not sure whether you are using correct grammar, find out be asking an English teacher or reading a book on grammar. It pays to enrich your speaking powers. Well educated people generally use proper grammar. If you are ever at a job interview, you'll sound more impressive by using correct grammar.

Do you got good grammar? To some people it really don't matter much how they talk. It might be that these people ain't got no pride or maybe they think that they can't do nothing about speaking bad. They should understand that with practice they could be much more better. None of youse guys can improve unless you really want to. No, it ain't easy but noth'in worth trying ever is. Once youse guys learn good grammar, speaking can get more funner. None of us really wants to talk bad.

Best Friend

A friend is the most important part of life.
Having a friend is like holding a key to everlasting happiness.
A day is always happiest when spent with a person you care for.
The best part about having a friend is being one, caring, sharing.
A friend is someone to share your feelings with laughing or crying.
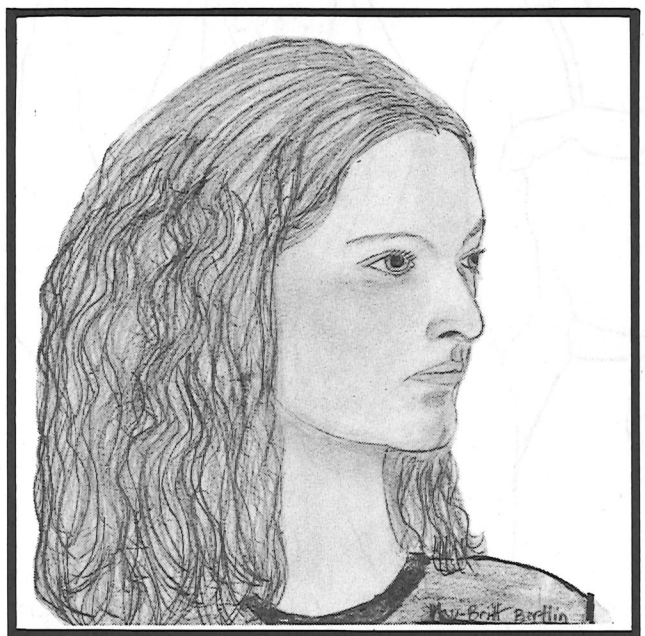
A friend brightens up every day,
and lightens the world around you.
A special friend makes every day warm and sunny,
because a friend
is beautiful.
There is no other love
like the love one friend has for another
But:
The best friend of all
is the friend that is forever.

By Lisa Allmendinger



Though miles away
true friends are like seasons
They stay with you,
forever,
wherever you go,
in mind and in heart. A.D.

My friend

Remember when,
we walked on the rocks
and I told you how I felt;
and you understood?
Remember when,
I couldn't make it through the hike;
And you rested with me?
Remember when,
You did something wrong and
I stood up for you,
so we both got in trouble;
And I didn't get mad?
Remember when,
We sat in the candlelight
and cried on each other;
And then we built each others'
hopes up?
Remember when,
you found a guy
And forgot about me;
And I never complained?
Remember when,
You realized what had happened
to us;
And you said you wanted another chance?
Remember when,
I had to think because I'd been hurt so deep;
And I couldn't answer right away?
Remember when,
I finally answered;
And said yes?

Lori Trammell

Dear Reader,

This Manitou contains material that all you great second semester creators submitted. Because our deadline last semester was so early, we decided to give you another chance to submit your work.

Many took advantage of this opportunity. We are grateful that we had so much material to work with. Unfortunately, we were not able to fit everything in because of space limitations. Present sophomores and juniors are encouraged to keep up with their drawing and writing so the next year's Manitou will have good material too.

I want to add a little personal thank you to all the great people at Lincoln. You made my year fantastic. I will always remember you.

Only a century ago

An age that was lost in time. An era so filled with mystery and excitement; with a sensation so rare and real. A place set aside in time for lovers strolling down lanes in a romantic way.

Only a century ago.

The present day picture wisks us up into a whirlpool and sends us reeling into a fantasy filled future.

Fancy frilled dresses with big wide hats. Pin striped suits and cravats with stick pins. Yesterday's traditions-today's treasures. They remain as shadows of days gone by, through the hourglass of time.

Only a century ago.

No matter how much I want to, I can't pick up the past and bring it to the present. Impossible and wrong, to live in the past and present came to fast.

The door to that age stands forever closed and time grasps her secrets and visions of memories as a reflection on our lives...a magical mist of mistique.

Only a century ago.

I am revealing a life that's been locked in my heart for so long, and the feeling has grown so strong. The people loved and lived for the day. What tomorrow would bring made no difference either way.

Happy for the moment that they shared, they loved one another and showed that they cared.

The laughter and the tears. A life full of mirrors...the reflection of the Victorian years.

Only a century ago.

The Kiss of a ghost

I crouch in a corner. Cold dark fear, awaiting me there in that bedroom. Quietly, oh so quietly, I stand. No sound.

A luminous figure, passing by me like I wasn't there, passing "through" me. Chills run down my spine. Frozen to the spot, my heart stops beating. Feeling a cold clammy hand around my neck, I see the figure again, his mouth spread in a grin. His grip tightens around my throat. Feeling my fear, he lets go to let out a jovial laugh.

Then his eyes transfixed on me, I look away. He touches my cheek to turn my face to his. I turn.

"He's toying with me. A ghost!" my mind says.

His eyes scan the length of my body. A hand lowers to the buttons of my satin blouse. One by one they pop open, exposing more and more.

Frightened and unsure, my hand makes a grab for his, but goes right through.

I look at him, his eyes are soft now. I try to pull away; but to no avail, for he is much stronger than I. And I am already drowning in the deep sea of his blue eyes.

Pulling me to him, his lips to mine, his kiss entrancing...

A kiss. A kiss? "A kiss from a ghost?"

"Yes," he says, "a kiss. The kiss of a ghost and more..." I find myself clinging to him just as tightly as he clings to me.

"As long as you have lived in this house I have watched you. I have watched you grow from a baby on. Now you are so beautiful. And I, a ghost of a man dead for more than a century, have fallen in love with you; a woman who lives and breathes."

Speechless, I stood staring at him.

"Watched me?" I asked.

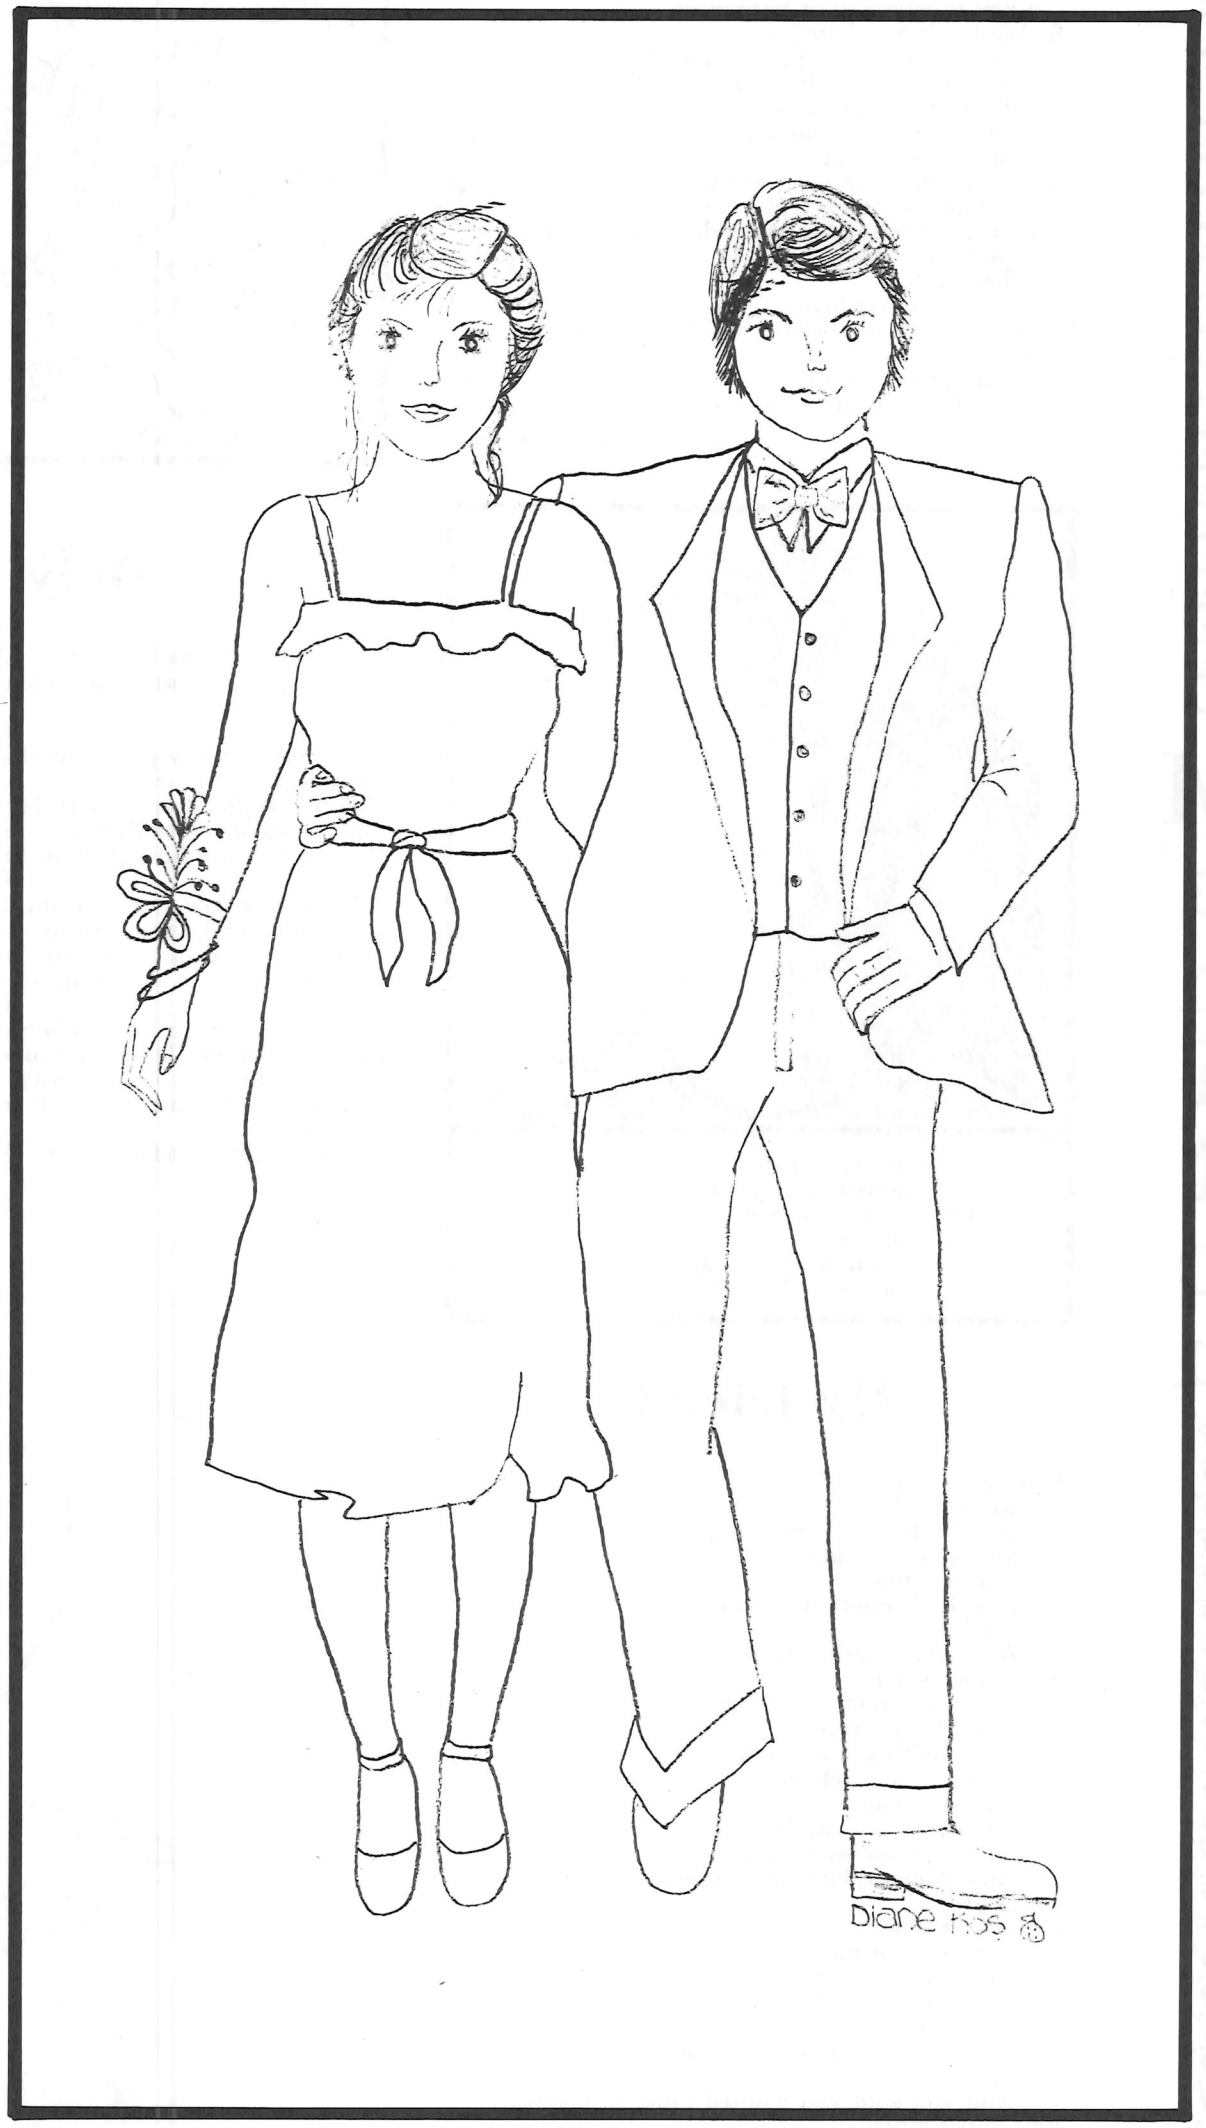
"Watched you always," he replied softly, "I'll watch you forever. For all I can do, is watch." His eyes looked sad.

"Why do I see a tear?" I asked him.

"Because I must leave you. A ghost can not live in a live man's world. I am only here to make my presence known to you I'll always be here when you need me. I'll always love you. . .love you forever".

He kissed me lightly, gently. His hand slipped from mine and faded away. He gave me his teardrop and it was now in my eye.

Amy Deubler



I never asked

I never asked for your pity, and I was glad when you didn't pity me.

I never asked for your preserverance, and yet you kept coming to the hospital to see me even when obstacles stood in your way.

I never asked you to care so much, but when I looked at you when moments were tense I could see the concern on your face.

I never asked you to be so sweet and kind, but somehow, through the haze I think you know that I needed you.

I never asked for your love, yet you gave it to me without question.

I never asked you to give of yourself so willingly, but you welcomed me into your loving open arms.

I never asked for the red roses that came to my front door, and you were so thoughtful to send them.

We reached out for one another, and though our paths were cluttered by people and their words we managed to find our way.

Now I know I did the right thing by turning to you. If I hadn't I would have been so blind. You offered so much to me.

I won't ever regret what I've done. For what I did I did out of love.

And what you did you did out of love for me too. And what's done out of love must be right.

Amy Deubler

The words still hurt to this day,
from the things I said not long ago,
And the roaring of the silence kept me so
Damn uptight.
I almost said I was sorry
But my mouth got in the way
So I ended up saying nothing
'cause there was nothing left to say,
Just that I wanted you to know,
That I loved you so much
I couldn't love you any more and like a thousand times before
I tried to tell you,
you're my sunshine and rain; my happiness,
my pain
And I was trying to let you know
the best I could,
That you were everything I ever needed.

If only I could have shown you
the next day,
What I was feeling deep down inside,
But I didn't want to take a chance of letting the whole thing come untied.
And my eyes reached out to touch you,
but the wall between us was just too high Ain't it sad how really love could have belonged together, you and I.
But I just wanted you to know,
That I loved you so much,
And that I couldn't love you any more.
But like a thousand times before,
I tried to tell you that you're my sunshine and rain, my happiness,
my pain.
And I tried to let you know the best I could,
you're everything I ever needed.

Love, Debbie

As I look at familiar places familiar faces
I can't help it if I think of you

Just thought I should let you know
That I wish I'd never let you go
And I know my love for you
Will never leave this broken heart of mine

Even though there's someone else
In your life now
I still think of you
And I can't help but cry,
For you meant the world to me
And I've somehow lost you...

C.L.

Give me sunshine and I will grow.
Give me love and I will grow.
Give me time and I will make you grow.

"A love that endears"

To you I give my heart and soul,
Into my arms you drifted,
you added your person to mine and made me
whole,
Like a shining star my hopes were lifted.

You took away all of my fears,
and showed me a life brand new,
you showed me a love that endears,
and the meaning of being true.

Morals and values mean everything now,
Regrets I have none
your faith shall endow,
your trust I have won.

Your love I will cherish until, from this earth, I do perish.

The sea captain-a sonnet

In Bry there was a man who once did dwell,
He loved the sea so crystal clear and blue
He sailed away, where he's gone one can't tell,
Some say to see his lover so fair and true.
Never again did he return,
He was born to be free and born to roam,
For the ocean knew all he had to learn,
The sea was like his life, the sea was home,
Folks who are young and old recall his name,
Some say he and his crew did die at sea,
Died never finding their fortune for fame,
They'll never find the treasure of the key.
Goodbye to the Captain of Bry, I say,
For you are remembered in every way.

Amy Deubler

Do I hate you?

My heart is broken
Because you were first
I feel all used up
Losing your love was the worst.

Someday I'll forget you
But my heart disagrees
I'll never forgive you
Not even for please.

My heart say's forgive you
And so does a friend
I want to forgive you
But this is the end.

My mind says I hate you and many others agree
To leave you forever
Or you'll keep hurting me.

So what should I do now?
My mind is confused
Could you love me
I feel oh so used.

How should I approach you?
Now that I know
You cheated on me
I know that is so.

You lied and hurt me
I was treated like dirt
You said that you loved me
But always you'd flirt.

I've made up my mind
After hours of thought
It was a tough decision
But the way I was taught.

But first let me say
That I'll love you forever
But you'll never know
Not now, not ever.

So goodbye forever
I'm as good as new
But I'll never know
Do I hate you?

Spiders

Down in the basement out of the light
Hidding in crevices that men never see
The sudden shock of a tingling web
You leap from your lair to eat the prey
Wham, a paper from nowhere breaks three of your legs
Try to escape it's no use
Foot of fate crunches you.

Games people play

Shadows creep in from the night creatures attack with pain unknown using weapons of only minds emotions they know how to control flee and hide it's no use only thing certain is death

James L. Franzen

Dead means

Not alive, gone,
suddenly disappeared...
before my eyes,
passed away,
gone to your reward,
not here, not there,
somewhere else,
down to the earth,
up to the sky,
so for now,
we must say goodbye.

Elegy

Who knows where you have gone in the summer nights heat? In the summer night's heat where we used to meet.

Down by the river in one another's arms we would quiver. We would steal away in the darkness of the night, and return before the morning's light.

Now that river has taken you away, but maybe we'll meet again someday, in that place where you have gone in the summer night's heat.

The death bell rang and my heart felt a pang for I knew who the bell was ringing for-for the one I so adore. The bell took a toll, and the river took a soul.

The birds stopped singing in the park, and the sky quickly turned to dark.

I cried through days and nights alone in the heat, remembering the river where we used to meet.

Seasons passed from summer to fall, and still I couldn't climb over the wall.

Seasons passed from fall to winter, the wall was still there and my heart held a splinter.

Seasons passed from winter, and summer layed its mournful cry once more upon me, and still that river was all I could see.

You were good and kind and gentle, sweet and caring and sentimental.

Forever is a word you can never be sure of, even when you give it all your love.

In an instant it is shattered, everything that ever mattered.

The river took a boy and along with him all of the joy. A life goes on, a life is lost, and to the wind I am tossed.

But you can bet, for my heart is set, someday somewhere far away in the summer night's heat, you and I again will meet.

Death seemed so far away until today

Mom says she wants to see you in the morning. And wouldn't you know it? Seems like life has poured itself down the drain.

You wouldn't talk to her. What's she supposed to think? Did you lose the meaning of all he meant to us? Did you really believe he'd go and do it? I don't know. I don't know.

Death seemed so far away until today. But how could he just take his life away? Why couldn't he stay?

Mom says she wants to see you in the morning. Says she can't cope with it right now. Just hope you'll see her through somehow. And wouldn't you know it? Seems like life has poured itself down the drain.

I guess life has its ups and downs. It's like traveling through a bunch of towns, searching for a dream to redeem. He never lets us know and yet there was so much to show. The things that were hidden inside of him grew darker and darker and soon they were too dim.

Lately he'd been so quiet and reserved as if punishing himself for all he thought he deserved. He'd smile once in a while, but his eyes had lost their sparkle and why, we'll never know. He just didn't want to continue to grow.

The time has come. I must leave you now. Remember what I said. Take care of mom and stay calm.

I walk out into the night. I look up into the sky and I need no sign. For I know that's where he'll go. So I say goodbye Beau. You were the best brother I ever had. Will I always feel this sad?

Finals are frustrating; Students study hard

Cram, Cram, Cram!

It's finals time here at LHS. The last week and the next few days are to test our competancy at taking tests.

During the process some of us may break down, because we can not handle the overload of tests in the time allotted. The average, which is around 2 to 3 tests a day, is still too much. Why can't teachers understand us, and take it easy on us? Since they won't, here are some hints to help you make it through the semester exams.

First of all, study the material well enough that you can memorize it forward and backward. Then learn it in several foreign languages. After that you should have it down pretty well, and if you do forget it, you might remember it in a different language.

The next hint is don't use the cop out of not having enough time to study. There's always time. Who needs sleep? Besides drinking coffee there are many ways to stay awake, such as putting toothpicks in your eyelids, and taking no-doze. Of course if these don't work, you can always get prescription medication.

In desparation when nothing else goes right, why not borrow the answer key? There are always teachers who leave them laying on the desk when they are absent from the room. To do this, however, you have to be very desperate, and have no morals.

If all of your efforts fail, you better get ready to cram.

Reserves offer part time jobs

Summer jobs are hard to find for high school students. For many, it seems like every grocery store or restaurant in town is either hiring college students or not hiring at all.

There is one place in town that hires high school students. It's the U.S. Army Reserve.

To be eligible, you must be at least a sophomore, and no less than 17 years old.

The reserves employ thousands of high school students across the country. The first year, these students work 85 days and earn approximately two thousand dollars.

If you apply and are accepted, you will spend the summer in initial entry training. This lasts eight weeks. During this time you are taught how to be a soldier at an active Army post.

Following this, you would work 16 hours a month with the local reserves. The reserves offer more than 350 different jobs including electronics, journalism, mechanics, and medicine.

If you're planning to go to college, the reserves could be a big help for you. The reserves offer up to $4000 in educational assistance.

While in college you can enter the simultaneous membership program. This allows you to take part in Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) and keep you reserve membership at the same time. The advantages of this are a possible promotion to officer ranks and more money.

If you are interested, you can find out more by contacting the local Army Reserves Representative.

by Jim Neuser

Well, another school year is coming to an end shortly and an end to my first year as the sports editor of the Hi-Tower Flashes.

During my first year I have talked to just about all the coaches here at LHS. These coaches have made my job as editor much easier. In trying to make themselves free for interviews and giving us information, sometimes at the last minute, they have really helped.

For their help and understanding throughout this year, I, Jim Neuser, extend a Thank you!!! I hope we can still work together next year as well as we did this year.

One other thing I'd like to say is congratulations to the spring sports teams on their fine job this year.

Good luck to Brian Knier and Mike Surfus at the WIAA Boys' State Track Meet.

Spring teams end season

The spring sports season is ending this weekend with all the state meets. All of our teams did a fine job this season.

The baseball team ended its season Wednesday, May 22, with a disappointing loss to Kimberly in the first game of the regional action. "We faced the best pitcher all year," said Coach Gene Mand. Kimberly went on to beat Kaukauna in the second game of Regionals.

Mand is looking forward to next year's team. This was Mand's first year as head coach and he has found several things that will be changed next year.

Last Tuesday the team had a fryout and award winners were named. Javier Alverez was voted Most Valuable Player. Dave Jagemann is Mr. Defense. Keith Bonde has the highest batting average and Paul Vraney is the leader on-base.

Tennis was second in their conference, and at Sectionals. Dan Beaupre placed fourth at Sectionals earning a trip to the state meet. Willy Schuette and Tom Zucchi took third in the doubles.

"Any time you send three people to state you have a good season," said Coach Bob Feller. Award winners will be announced next week at their fryout.

Finishing in the top half at large meets is something you strive for and the boys' track team did just that this season. The team won the FRVC Indoor Track Meet and was second in the outdoor meet.

At the Sectional meet the team took third over all. Brian Knier won the mile in 4:22 and Mike Surface won the high jump with a leap of six feet, four inches, earning them spots at the WIAA state meet.

The girls' track also had a great season. The team placed fourth in the WIAA Sectional meet and qualified two events for the state track meet in Madison.

Joy Wiegert won the high jump with a height of 5′ 2″. The 800-meter relay team of Ann Fritsch, Lori Gigure, Andrea Jaehnig, and Debbie Schmidt won in school record time of 1:46.9.

Coach Pam Kjono is very pleased with the team this year. "We did better than I expected with so many sophomores," said Kjono.

As with the other sports, golf also had a very young and inexperienced team. "We're going to be strong for the next couple of years," says Coach Duane Hord.

The team won their Regionals which they hosted at Branch River Country Club. The team then took fourth in their Sectionals.

The most consistant player on the golf team is Junior Mark Check. Clem Bradley is the most improved team member, in Hord's opinion.

Have fun in the city; Visit your local parks

With summer vacation being just around the corner, many people wonder what activities they can do to keep themselves busy once vacation arrives.

Some might decide they want to go camping for a weekend. Then there are those who just don't know what they will do.

Here are some ideas for those of you who don't have the time to go on a vacation and who don't like traveling a long way from home.

In Manitowoc alone, we have 19 parks with many facilities.

One of them is Citizen's Park. This park has something for just about everyone. The park contains three tennis courts two basketball courts, two Volleyball courts, two lighted softball diamonds, a baseball diamond, a soccer field, a swimming pool, picnic areas, and a childrens' play area.

Another very nice park is Silver Creek Park. Located on the shores of lake Michigan, it contains many rural-like wooded picnic areas. There are nature trails for hiking through the park, a playground area, a soccer field, and a field-house.

There are many other parks within the city limits but don't forget places in the county. Maribel Caves has an open field, toys for the youngsters, and lots of nice nature trails.

So if you're wondering what to do this summer, why not go to a park near you and have some fun.

Jona Haese ran a fine race at a home meet.

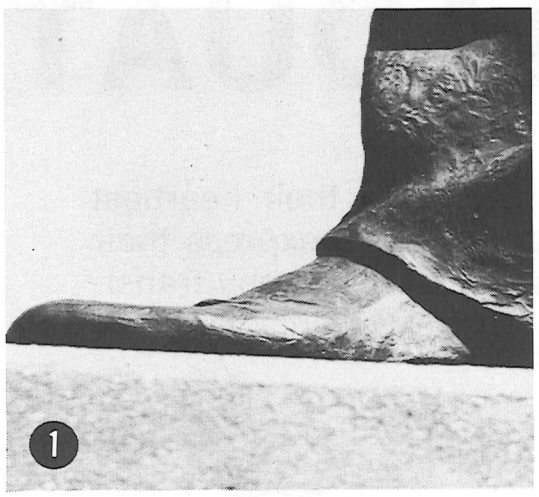
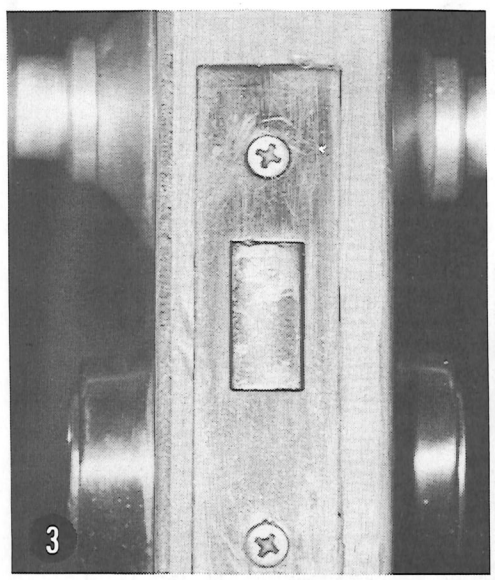
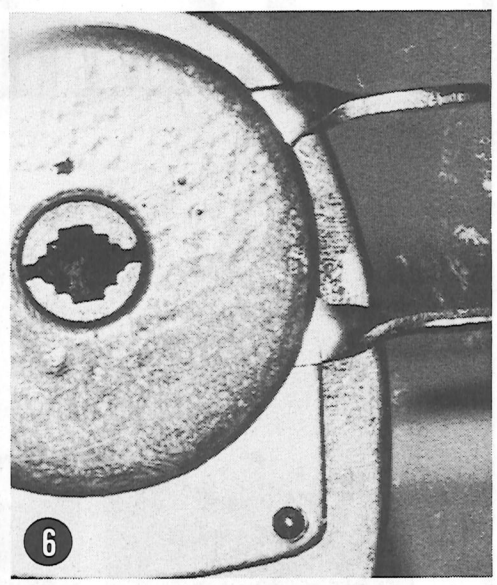
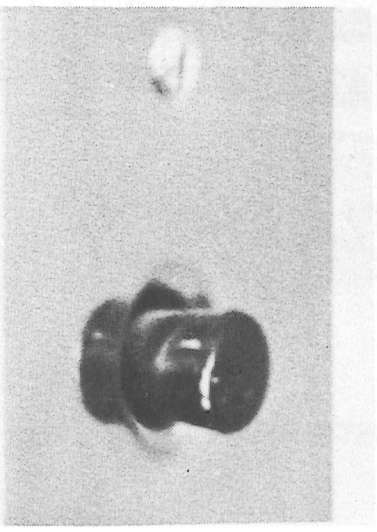
Things you often see but never notice

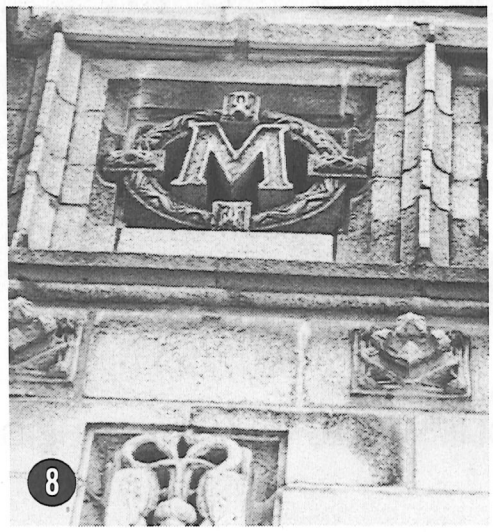


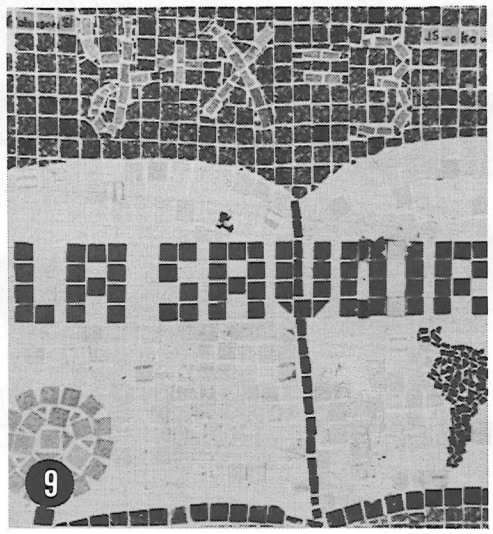
You see so many things in school, but do you actually see them? To test your observation skills, we took close up pictures, or parts of close up pictures. Now you try figure out what they are of and where they are. Some of them are simple, but others are a little different. See if you know what they are!
The photos are by Steve Demsien and Brad Kautzer.

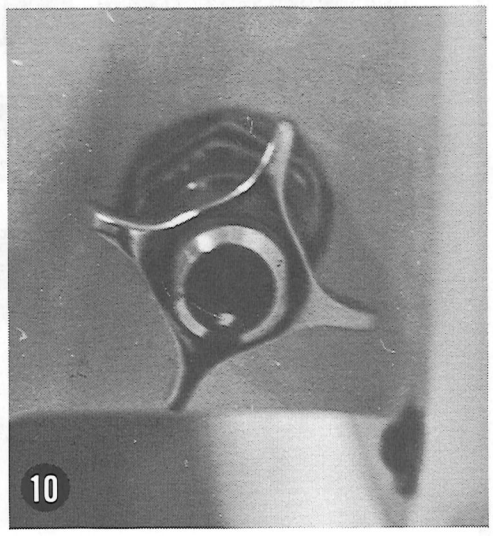












1 — This has been standing in the circle since 1961. It is Abe Lincoln's foot.
2 — Not many students realize that Lincoln has a wheelchair entrance sign in the teacher's parking lot between the old gym and the library.
3 — A typical door, from a cross-eyed view.
4 — Who ever sees the fire alarm horn during a fire drill?
5 — Not everyone looks up when they walk through a door. This is the entrance to the swimming pool on the west side of the building.
6 — A pencil's view of the ever-present but hard-to-find pencil sharpener.
7 — Most rooms have a call button to call the people in the office.
8 — Once again looking up to an entrance. This is entering the old gym from the circle driveway.
9 — While rushing off to lunch, how many really notice things on the way down the staircase?
10 — The lifesaving, thirst quenching water bubbler. Have you ever really looked at the handle?
